KEEP EGGS FOR WINTER, EXPERT TELLS WOMEN

Process of Putting Them Away is Described by Mrs. Anna B. Scott.

(By Mrs. Anna B. Scott, Culinary Expert of the Philadelphia North American.)

Why not preserve eggs for next winter's use, for puddings, pies and cakes? Every housekeeper knows that in December and January eggs are very scarce. Those are the months that the hens have their vacation, as it were. Then, why not preserve the eggs now, when they begin to be plentiful and cheap?

One must be sure that the eggs are strictly fresh before putting them up for winter use, and if correctly done there is quite a saving from twenty to twenty-five cents a dozen now (that is city prices) to forty and forty-five cents at Christmas time. If one lives in the country or has them shipped by parcel post from a reliable farmer in an egg carrier, there are carriers or cartons with steel frames costing twenty-five cents apiece, which hold four dozen eggs and are shipped by parcel post, costing twelve cents for four dozen and seven cents to return the empty carrier. Why not have the farmer send the fresh eggs once or twice a week while they are plentiful and cheap?

They are very easily done up. The solution is made and the eggs are put in one dozen at a time, or where folks have their own chickens, why not put some of the eggs in daily? This can easily be done.

Last year was the first time I ever put up eggs, and my experience was most successful. I could poach the eggs very successfully, which is usually a good test. Not that I put them up expecting to poach them. My object in preserving the eggs was to see what success I would have, and for baking and cooking I have found them perfectly satisfactory.

Save Ten Cents a Dozen.

Why not save ten cents on the dozen of eggs? If eggs are twenty or twenty-five cents a dozen, then, by the time carrier, postage and preservation are paid, when one lives in the city, eight to ten cents must be added to the cost of a dozen eggs, making them thirty to thirty-five cents a dozen, as compared to forty and forty-five cents during the two winter months.

I heard of a place not so very far from the city, I think in the first parcel post zone, where fresh eggs were sold for eighteen cents a dozen last week. Why were they so cheap, when we were paying from twenty-eight to thirty-four cents in the city? This particular small farm is off from the main road and the hucksters that gather the eggs do not go there and the country store is a long distance from the farm, but the farmer could send his eggs in the small four-dozen carrier with the rural parcels delivery at twelve cents for the carrier of four dozen eggs. Two quarts of silicate of soda liquid glass, will do up thirty dozen eggs.

Put the eggs in earthen crocks, wooden lard or butter tubs cover and set in a cool place.

This is the Process.

One quart of silicate of soda (water glass); ten quarts of water. Boil and cool water; add silicate of soda; put in earthen crock or crocks, or wooden tub. Examine the eggs, being sure there are none cracked. Eggs can be added; it is not necessary to fill the crock at once. When there are as many as one wants to do up, paste or tie a piece of muslin over the top and wet with the solution before putting in cool place.

Now, this would not pay if the housekeeper had to buy stone crock, but most housekeepers have a stone crock and some large glass jars; others have wooden pails which can be used for this purpose.

A managing housekeeper who has a very large household told me she did up thirty dozen eggs last year which she bought from her butter and egg man and that every one was good. She says that she is going to do up ninety dozen this year, as she uses twelve to fifteen dozen a week. The eggs this woman used were not gathered one day and preserved the next. They were the regular fresh eggs one buys from the butter and egg man, who comes around twice a week.

Production of the second comedy in which William Collier will be presented on the Triangle by Thomas H. Ince was completed this week under the direction of Scott Sidney. Those who have had the privilege of seeing it on the screen state that it is even funnier than "The No-Good Guy," Collier's first starring vehicle under the Ince colors.

WOUNDED IN VILLA FIGHT, IS PENSIONED

Private Yarborough's Left Arm Shattered as the Result of Bandit Raid.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 29.—The first American soldier who will get a pension as a result of the Villa attack on Columbus is John V. Yarborough, private in Troop C, Thirtieth Cavalry. Private Yarborough was shot through the left arm, necessitating amputation just below the elbow. Of the six wounded soldiers, Yarborough is the only one permanently disabled and, therefore, the only trooper entitled to pension. Yarborough served in the Philippines, but was never wounded before.

Yarborough's Story.

Following is Private Yarborough's own story of the Villista raid on Columbus: "I was on sentry post a few minutes after 4 o'clock on the morning of March 9 when I heard shots and shouts at the other side of Columbus. Then I heard a fusillade. I heard Mexicans shouting as they rushed through our camp toward the town. 'Viva Villa! Muerta a los gringos!' they yelled as they ran, firing. 'The six of us at the guard house sought cover and began firing whenever we could spot a Mexican by the flash of his gun or his yell. The bandits came running and yelling. They had left their horses outside of Columbus. We said nothing, but pumped lead into them as fast as we could load and unload. There must have been forty attacked the guard house, but we six held the guard house, and I was the only man wounded. A comrade was with me behind the lumber pile and the other four men were shooting around the corners of the house.

"We had been firing for perhaps ten minutes and the bullets were flying thick all around us—some had knocked splinters from the lumber into our faces—when my comrade said: 'Mate, let's beat it!'

"I would liked to have cleared out, but I am a soldier and I thought of the women and children in Columbus, who would be left to the mercy of the savages. I said to my comrade: 'If you attempt to beat it I will kill you like I am the Mexicans.' He stuck with me. I told Lieutenant James P. Castleman we would hold the house, and we did.

His Arm Shattered.

"I had dropped several Mexicans and was just raising my elbow to fire at a Mexican who was running straight at me when a chance shot from his rifle plugged me in the arm. It felt like I had been hit with a baseball bat. A dum dum bullet, 45 caliber, makes an awful wound. My arm was numb in an instant and I could not fire my rifle, so I dropped it and grabbed my revolver with my right hand and kept up the fight. I killed the man who shot me and several of his pals bit the dust close to the lumber pile. The lumber was peppered with bullets from the Mexicans' Winchester. They are good marksmen, though, and many bullets went whizzing over us. Mexicans devote a lot of energy in yelling bloody murder when they should be shooting. The Villistas had been told that if they attacked the Americans it would be a rout, because the 'gringos will run.' We learned this from wounded bandits. They will not stand the gas. Once you fire into a detachment of Mexicans and drop some of them they will scatter and run for it.

"The attack started shortly after 4 o'clock, just after the moon went down, and it was as dark as a stack of black cats. That is one reason why we killed only 200 out of 500 that attacked us. I think our boys are pretty good marksmen, for they got one for each of us Americans at Columbus, besides the wounded. When day began to break the bandits ran to their horses and rode straight for the border. We chased them for five miles into Mexico, and a number were killed during the chase.

Defends Officers.

"There has been a lot of talk about us being surprised by the Villistas. The papers have said many of the officers were not on the job for a long time after the battle opened. It has also been said that there was only one officer actually on duty.

"These statements are untrue. I know positively there were three lieutenants actually on duty and wide awake. They were Lieutenant Castleman, the officer of the day; Lieutenant Lucas, in command of a machine gun company, and Lieutenant Cummings—and I believe there were other officers awake and on the job. Most of the officers were in houses on the other side of town. They had nowhere else to go.

"There were at least 500 Villistas, and we had only 200 men in camp. The remainder were doing patrol duty miles from Columbus. The time the Villistas chose to attack made it almost impossible for us to have prevented them from entering Columbus. It was pitch dark and they could slip through our lines without us knowing it, because we could not patrol such a wide range with so few men. It is not true that the Mexicans used machine guns, nor is it true that they captured any of ours. It is true that one of our machine guns jammed, but this was because our men were loading and firing in the dark. However, they were not jammed more than a few moments. A machine gun or any kind of a gun is liable to jam at any time, day or night.

"The stories about the Villistas stealing 100 horses is false. They got only twenty in all, and these were the band horses—the worst mounts we had. These horses were not really stolen, but when the firing began they stampeded and the Mexicans drove them off when they fled.

"After the fight I was sent to El Paso by the doctors. Ten hours after I had been wounded they amputated my arm. I told the surgeons to save as much of my wing as they could. I was glad they left me as much as they did. When I got to El Paso and while sitting in an automobile waiting to be driven to Fort Bliss hospital report-ers tried to interview me, but I was sore and would not even tell them my name. A photographer talked to me for an hour to get me to pose, but I was in no mood for posing.

"I will remain at Fort Sam Houston for perhaps a month or six weeks. I will then be discharged and retired on pension of $45 a month. I intend to go to Staunton, Va., where I was born, for a visit to my people, and then I will go to Washington, where I hope to get a job around the war department at a salary of $50 or $75 a month.

Wherein Waite Rugs Excel

Economical—Because of the low price at which they are sold and because of their extreme durability.

Sanitary—Because they do not hold the dust—it sifts through to the floor—leaving the rug always bright, fresh looking and dustless.

Artistic—Because their harmonious colorings blend into the attractive natural shade of the strongly flexible wire mesh body and because of a wide range of exquisite patterns.

Convenient—Convenience is one of the strongest features of Waite Rugs. The housewife has learned to value them for this feature; she has found that she has only to roll up her Waite Rug, sweep the floor beneath, unroll the rug again and her work is done.

Let Waite settle your rug problem for all time. It will mean to you the maximum of attractiveness in the home at positively a minimum of expense. Waite is the rug of today—and tomorrow.

A Large Selection of All Sizes—See Window Display.

Three colors: Blue stripe, Red stripe and Tan stripe. Latest designs in Grass goods.

On The Porch

The Waite Rug is the most appropriate rug for porch use that exists. This is true because of its dustless qualities, the fact that it is impervious to moisture and that every Waite Rug carries with it an atmosphere of the "out-of-doors."

The Waite Rug with a few porch chairs, and perhaps a hammock or swinging seat, will make your porch a most delightful retreat during the hot weather. It will, in effect, add a comfortable, well ventilated room to your house. The fact that Waite Rugs are made in all sizes makes them especially convenient for porch use.

In The Office

No better floor covering for office use has ever been discovered than Waite Fine Weave Grass Rugs. You will at once appreciate the truth of this statement, and what it means, when you reflect upon the dustless qualities of Waite, their sanitary features, their cheerful colorings, unique patterns and extreme durability.

An office rug is subjected to pretty hard usage; the Waite stands the wear and tear with truly remarkable success. We have recently had the pleasure of outfitting several suites of offices with Waite Rugs, and the resulting improvement in the appearance of these suites is indeed gratifying.
